NOTE:

- DARS is the official degree audit tool used by ASU to track undergraduate graduation requirements. DARS audits include transfer credits, in-progress and completed coursework. The DARS audit does not factor in any needed prerequisites that may increase the total credits needed for degree completion.

- When evaluating potential transfer credit, ASU's University Registrar Services removes duplicate or repeated course credit, which may affect total completed credits.

- While an unlimited number of credits can be transferred to ASU from four-year institutions, how those credits apply to a degree program is determined by the ASU college of the major. A maximum of 64 credit hours from regionally-accredited community, junior or two-year institutions (except for some special programs) may be applied to the degree.
